Prayer for the Class of '39

May we meet disappointment and distress
With all of youth's brave, glowing zest;
And day by day give thanks to Thee above
For Thy deep, satisfying love.

May we, the Class of '39
Find dreams and visions in the sign
Of destiny, that moulds our lives to be
The ships on life's wild, stormy sea.

May we to our fellow-man
Always lend a helping hand;
And grant us patience that we may
Be more forgiving day by day.

May we find in the horizon's far line
A future bright with joys that come with time;
And may our hearts and souls with beauty thrill
For God! Tomorrow waits us still.

JANE LEE ROUDABUSH.

Senior Class History

ATE in September, 1935, we, the Class of 1939, filed our passports as passengers aboard the powerful plane, "Luray High," for a four years' flight to a distant landing field called "Graduation". After our propellers had been swung by the faculty, who were interested in our flight to the unexplored regions which lay before us, our plane soared gracefully into new and adventurous heights.

The day was bright, and our hopes were high as we journeyed upward in our flight. We had no fear, for we had confidence in our efficient flying instructors—Mrs. Ruth Hamilton and Mr. Edwin Rothgeb. Realizing the length of our journey, we elected Amos Cave, Jr., pilot; Clara Shirley, co-pilot; Jane Lee Roudabush, hostess; and Ned Strickler, mechanic.

With these officers in command of our plane, we started for "Sophomore Field"—the first stop for supplies, etc. Our first year was spent in becoming better acquainted with our fellow-passengers and studying hard, that in the faraway future we might become "licensed pilots".

After a pleasant flight of eight months, we landed, without much skidding, at "Sophomore Field" where we took aboard some strangers that were seeking to make the remainder of the flight with us.

The following September with Kerfoot Sanford as pilot; Theda Logan, co-pilot; Jane Lee Roudabush, hostess; and Denver Aleshire, mechanic, we set out for "Junior Field"—the next to the last stop on our flight. By this time the great majority of us were experienced passengers and had completely gotten over the sickening sensation of riding the air waves. A few of our number, however, were possessed with the daring desire to jump with their parachutes into "Matrimony Field", "Independence Field", and several other fields over which we flew during the year.

We had several parties aboard our dear old plane, "Luray High," that year which the passengers and the crew seemed to enjoy immensely.

After another journey of eight months above the clouds, we made a three-point landing at "Junior Field" where we partook of the delights of cool lemonade, cooler swimming-pools, with an occasional frolic at the "Hi-Way Shoppe" and the "Dutch Kitchen".

Early in September with our experienced officers—Amos Cave, Jr., as pilot; Lois Wakeman, co-pilot; Theda Logan, hostess; and Denver Alishire, mechanic—we set out for “Senior Field”, our final landing. On this flight, we exerted greater effort to discharge our duties with pleasure to ourselves and honor to our plane. A few passengers, who had become very “dizzy” before reaching our last landing-field, decided to jump with their parachutes into the unknown. The rest of the crew wished them a happy landing and continued on their journey.

After a vacation of three months, we boarded our ship as “licensed pilots” and started again on our flight to the long-sought haven, “Graduation”. The following officers were in command of the plane: Amos Cave, Jr., pilot; Theda Logan, co-pilot; Lois Wakeman, hostess; and Settle Frank, mechanic. Consulting our radio telephone, we found that there were treacherous storms ahead.

Conscious of our duties and responsibilities as “licensed pilots”, we did our best to make the last mile of our momentous flight the best.

Near the end of the flight, eleven members of the passengers and crew presented “Early to Bed, Early to Rise”, chosen by our flying instructor, Mrs. Pearl Berry, as an ideal play for the entertainment of the passengers.

As we neared our goal, we realized that we had gained invaluable knowledge from our experiences on our flight. We glided safely to the field of “Graduation”, and the good ship, “Luray High,” which had so gallantly ridden the storms, was placed in the hangar of “Success”. The last night of the trip proved to be a great success and one which will linger long in our memories of by-gone days. It was then that the “licensed pilots” wished for each other many “happy landings” in the future.

The Senior Play

THE Senior Class of the Luray High School presented its annual play May 5, at 8:00 p. m. in the Luray High School Auditorium. The play was a three-act comedy by William F. Davidson entitled "Early to Bed, Early to Rise". The cast was under the able direction of Mrs. Pearl H. Berry.

"Early to Bed, Early to Rise" was the story of an all American family in a batty and charming play. The characters were Abbie Fuller, Jane Lee Roudabush; Everett Fuller, Bruce Black; Mariam Fuller, Lois Wakeman; Bobby Fuller, Denver Aleshire, Jr.; Patsy Fuller, Madalyn Mims; James Griggs, Billy Laws; Laura Montgomery, Mary Jane Strickler; Mr. Kirchmeir, Amos Cave, Jr.; Mr. Conkel, Earl Strickler; Dale Fairfax, Carolyn Printz.

The Junior-Senior Prom

THE Junior-Senior Prom, one of the main events on the social calendar at the Luray High School, was held in the gymnasium of the school on Friday, May 12, from 8:30 p. m. to 12:30 p. m. This party is an annual affair; at which time the juniors honor the seniors.

Music was furnished by Eddie Branner and his ten-piece orchestra. The gym was artistically decorated in the Senior Class colors, blue and white. The highlight of the evening was the Grand March led by Gerald Black, president of the junior class, and Miss Peggy Mims.

The sponsors of the Prom were Mrs. Mary Bradley Jones and Miss Lena Martha Bohannon, teachers of the junior class.

Commencement

FIFTY-FIVE members of the largest graduating class in the history of the Luray High School received diplomas on Monday, June 5, at the high school auditorium before a capacity audience. Prof. C. T. Chapman, himself ending a career in the public schools, handed the graduates their diplomas after a short address in which he lauded the work of the largest class on record. Amos Cave, Jr. and Lois Wakeman acted as valedictorian and salutatorian respectively. Scholastic awards were made to the three highest ranking students in the class, Amos Cave, Jr., Lois Wakeman, and Jane Lee Roudabush. Amos Cave, Jr., was presented the Balfour Key for scholarship, loyalty, and achievement. Lois Wakeman was the winner of the Reader's Digest award for scholastic achievement. Jane Lee Roudabush received the D. A. R. award for the best essay on "What America Means to Me."

The graduates who earned forty or more credits during their high school years were Amos Cave, Jr., Lois Wakeman, Jane Lee Roudabush, Bruce Black, Madalyn Mims, Tommy Menefee, Elizabeth Stover, Settle Frank, Theda Logan, William Laws, Irene Flanagan, Richard Winsbro, Hessel Brumback, Catherine Munro and Drexel Somers.

The Senior Class gift, a check to be applied on the purchase of shades for the auditorium, was presented to the school by Amos Cave, Jr., president of the graduating class, who also presented a check from the Special Seniors.

Charles Chapman, retiring principal, was the recipient of two awards by the students in appreciation of his services to the student body for eight years. The first award was the naming of a fund to be established by the Latin Club for worthy students as the "Chapman Loan and Scholarship Fund." The second award was a handsome mahogany swivel chair presented by the entire faculty and student body.

Athletic awards were presented by Prof. Edwin E. Rothgeb, coach of the high school athletic teams.

Organizations

GLEE CLUB

MR. C. T. CHAPMAN Director

The Luray High School Glee Club is an old, but well-established organization. It is to improve pupils' voices and help them enjoy the school life. It is ranked very high throughout the state for its perfection.

The Glee Club takes several trips each year, one of the chief ones being the State Convention in Richmond.

BETA CLUB

MRS. PEARL BERRY Faculty Advisor

The Beta Club is a state organization.

The Beta Club was organized in the High School in 1937-38 by Mrs. Berry. It stands for the betterment of the community by teaching correct morals and manners, by requiring a high scholastic record for entrance, by making the members help others raise the standards, and by the members themselves holding this work high.

4-H CLUB

The 4-H Club is a very educational club in teaching and helping pupils raise animals and vegetables. Its goal is to have them raise much larger crops at a cheaper cost, also to have them grow crops on poor land through the experience of work as to just what is needed.

The 4-H Club of Luray is going forward fast. It was represented at the County Fair by newly grown crops.

LATIN CLUB

A Member of the National Classical Association

OFFICERS

Isabel Rodes	Consul primus
Alda Campbell	Consul Secundus
Robert Logan	Quaestor
Jean Holtzman	Censor
Robert Winsbro	Lictor

The Latin Club was organized in 1937-38 by the present Senior Class. Mrs. Durette is its sponsor. The objectives of the Club are (1) to increase interest in the study of Latin, (2) to show relation of Latin to practical life, (3) to give pleasure to its members.

The Club began this year the establishment of an endowment fund to assist students through college. This fund will be adequately protected by proper court action. No money can be loaned before 1941. It is expected and hoped that many persons will make voluntary contributions to this fund.

May Day

ON Tuesday, May 16, a May Day Festival was held on the Luray High School grounds.

Miss Mary Jane Strickler was crowned queen of the festival, and her court of honor included Princesses Elizabeth Modesitt and Elva Griffith and their escorts Eugene Mauck and Thomas Dovel—freshmen; Princesses Alice Barham and Louise Rickard and their escorts Granville Moyer and Junior Shenk—sophomores; Princesses Ann Speake and Elizabeth Kibler and their escorts Aubrey Speake and James Clark—juniors; Princesses Jean Holtzman and Ruth Aleshire and their escorts Settle Frank and Richard Long—special seniors; Princesses Ethel Berrey and Lois Wakeman and their escorts William Laws and Bruce Black—seniors.

The maid of honor, Miss Carolyn Printz; guard of honor, Dudley Broyles, and the prince consort, Ned Strickler, approached the court and took their places beside the throne of their queen. The approach of the queen and her trainbearers, Emily Menefee and Charlotte Shenk, was announced by the heralds as she came in sight and approached the court. Upon her arrival to her lovely bower, her admiring court bowed low in homage to her majesty. The crown of flowers was placed on her head by Prince Consort immediately after she took her flower-decked throne.

The court jesters arrived, dressed in their foolish finery, and performed their merry pranks for the amusement of the court. The Indians next appeared with their war-paint and stern-looking faces and danced their curious rhythmic war-dance. Following were the Dutch girls, the Swedish girls, and the Hungarian girls. The Colonial Dance was next on the program and was followed by the Maypole Dance. The Maypole Dance is said to be the oldest country dance now in use. It expresses happy, joyful country life and charms the eye by its gay simplicity, and the bright young faces added to the attraction of the gay festival with their careless abandon of youth.

The Recessional followed which completed the first May Day Festival ever sponsored by the Luray High School.
